7.1 Presentation: Congressman Adam Gray-California's 13th

Congressman Gray gave an update on gridlock and government shutdown in Washington DC, and the lack of people not being able to work together. After being in Sacramento for 10 years, he had a reputation of being able to work across party lines. He still has that commitment but is not seeing people reaching across party lines at all in Washington. But he's hopeful that they start behaving and work diplomatically and end this government shut down. Over the past 10 months in Congress, he's been working on bi-partisan bills working with other freshmen legislators. Focusing mostly recently on health care, which is a huge issue in the San Joaquin Valley. He spent the better part of a decade trying to build a medical school at UC Merced. The central valley is lacking in health care service, access and infrastructure. The ACA tax credit loss would have a significant impact in the valley especially with 60% of the area being served by California's Medi-cal program. He's introduced legislation to reverse the cuts to the Medi-Cal program and to extend the premium ACA tax credit permanently. Introduced legislation focused on agriculture and tariffs to treat food differently than other products as it relates to tariffs to stop raising prices on our food program. Working on a bi-partisan bill to get more educational resources out to communities and police departments as it relates to the fentanyl crisis. And of course, immigration is huge for communities with agriculture. They have the dignity act and the farm worker modernization act both would seek to offer security to those that are here working in our agricultural communities, following the law and contributing to our communities. There are 10 democrats and 10 republicans signed onto the bill. Our country is stronger when we all work together. But Washington is certainly lacking that bi-partisan spirit. He thinks it's important that he's there on our behalf to continue to try and foster the same collaboration that has literally been the political identity of Northern San Joaquin Valley and much of the Central Valley for its history.

Also a significant amount of investments toward system capacity. The state is pushing towards a 100% electric future making gas obsolete. A few weeks ago they were able to take Congressman Gray to one of their gas facilities in Hilmar showing him the renewable gas project within the ag community. A lot of money is going into fleet electric vehicles and electric vehicles. Will see a lot more of that popping in years ahead.*

Thought it was a great program. and she shared with the City of Madera and City of Chowchilla thinking would be a benefit for them as well. Attended the GMCIA meeting where the City of Madera Chief of Police shared about active shooting especially in a manufacturing setting. Plus, the importance of having a plan. She will be attending a class in Fresno to finish an Economic Development certificate. The program is hosted by CALED. At the end of October, she will be going on a Southern California Mission trip with CCVEDC. They will be meeting with brokers and site selectors. She encouraged the Board to go through projects of interest section in her report on their own time. The information shows how Madera County market is doing. She's been working on a new project capitalizing on any available incentives. GOBIZ is featuring Freedom Industrial Park on their new Business Ready site. One out of 19 properties to be accepted. They will be accepting a total of 50 sites. Projects overall, Yosemite Travel Center broke ground in Tesoro Viejo. They will have a convenience center, Jamba Juice, and a Car Wash. Thanked all for their support as November 4th as her one-year anniversary. Looking forward to next year. September 13th was the end of session for the legislature. The biggest bill package was the Cap & Trade program now named Cap & Invest. They extended it for another 15 years. Bills that we have taken positions on are AB 265 which was vetoed and AB415 is a lot better than AB 98. Take your time and read through her report regarding all the bills.
